

New York, NY

NF
IV-V

Dec. 16, 1811
Feb. 07, 1812

Poulson's American Daily Advertiser
Feb. 10, 1812

New York, Feb. 8.

Yesterday morning, at half past four o'clock, a smart shock of an Earthquake was felt in this city.

Farmer's Cabinet
Feb. 24, 1812

New York, Feb. 10

The Earthquake was very distinctly felt in this city on Friday evening, and occasioned considerable jarring of kitchen utensils, vibration of suspended articles, sensible motion, dizziness and alarm, in many intelligent and respectable families; while nothing of it was perceived by others, or by the watchmen &c. The shock continued nearly two minutes. On Friday morning a commotion nearly familiar in its circumstances, was experienced in Philadelphia. And on Thursday evening a shock was felt by several persons (says the Commercial Advertiser in this city). The earthquake of the 16th of December to the 30th inclusive, which was felt from the Atlantic to the Ohio and Missouri, was also experienced to a very great degree in Rockland county, and on the Jersey shore opposite this city, but not even suspected this side of the Hudson. There has been no instances of such continued and repeated shocks recorded in the history of this country.